MONEY-MAKING SUMMER ACTIVITIES

Summer has arrived! While you're enjoying the slower pace of summer break, you can beat the boredom while generating a little income with these money-making summer activities:

Offer care for four-legged friends – From dog walking to dog bathing to pet sitting, the options for caring for furry four-legged friends can be a fun way to make a quick buck. If you notice pet owners walking their pets through your neighborhood, create a flyer featuring your contact information and the services you are willing to provide – it's an easy way to offer your services next time you see a pet owner walking by your house!

Assist a senior – You can be a huge help to a local senior (whether a grandparent, great grandparent, neighbor, or acquaintance) while making a little money on the side. Run some errands, do some yardwork or housework, or simply be a friend to a lonely senior.

Become a camp counselor – Working at a local summer camp is a great way to have a little summer adventure while mentoring younger kids and earning a little money, too.

Organize a yard sale – Maybe you've noticed a lot of outgrown toys or clothing around your house, or maybe your family's garage is overflowing – your parents may be too busy to organize and run a garage sale themselves, but maybe if you offer to tackle the job yourself they'll let you keep the proceeds. Get your friends, relatives, and neighbors in on it for an even larger yard sale.

Offer tech support – If you're handy in the tech zone, offer your assistance to older folks who may not be as tech-savvy as you. You could offer to organize digital photos and create albums, assist with data entry, or even help an older folk create a Facebook page or learn how to use a new phone or device.

Being Smart in the Sun is for Everyone

Did you know that blistering sunburns in childhood can double a person's lifetime chances of developing serious forms of skin cancer? While many teens may covet bronzed skin and are drawn to sunbathing, it's important to realize that the sun's rays can be harmful and have lasting effects. That doesn't mean you need to avoid the sun altogether. In fact, the sun provides our bodies with Vitamin D, which is an essential vitamin. Rather, learn to protect yourself from the sun's most harmful rays to protect your skin and your health both now and in the future.

Apply sunscreen.

Use a minimum SPF of 30 and apply it 20 minutes before going outside so it has time to absorb into your skin. If you will be sweating or playing in water, be sure to choose a water-resistant sunscreen, and don't forget to reapply it every two hours, even on cloudy days!

Wear sunglasses.

Sunglasses aren't just an accessory – they protect your eyes much like sunscreen protects your skin. Just be sure to choose sunglasses that offer at least 99% UV protection.

Avoid midday sun.

The sun is at its hottest and its rays are most harmful from about 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Try to limit your sun exposure during this time and be extra diligent in applying (and reapplying) sunscreen during these hours.

Be mindful of medications.

If you're on medications for anything, consult a parent to ensure your medication will not make you more susceptible to burns. This includes antibiotics and acne creams.
